How did the Fund perform in the last year?

The Fund recorded a positive return for the 12-month reporting period, but underperformed its benchmark, the Russell 3000 Index—which tracks the performance of the 3,000 largest U.S. companies representing approximately 96% of the investable U.S. equity market.

U.S. stocks rose significantly during the reporting period as a result of strong corporate earnings as investors became less concerned about inflation. Growth stocks outperformed relative to value stocks, and shares of larger-capitalization companies outperformed relative to smaller-capitalization stocks. Lower-beta stocks generally lagged relative to higher-beta stocks.

Positions in the information technology and communication services sectors were the most notable positive contributors to Fund performance as they included several of the mega-cap growth stocks that led the market over the reporting period. Conversely, the utilities and consumer staples sectors were the primary detractors from Fund performance as those low-beta sectors underperformed the overall market during the period.
